Reference to the Case of Rev. H. M. Whaling, TO-DAY'S RACES.

Last night Memphis stood upon the brink, so to speak, of a terrible accident, in which several lives came very near being lost. It was almost a miracle that no damage was done to human life. The old Gayoso House has for several years been a standing menace to the lives, health and morality of a small part of the Memphis populace. About 8 o'clock last night Joseph Stilkes and wife were standing in the door of their room, which forms one corner of the court, when MEMPHIS, TENN., August 5, 1881 The committee appointed at the last meet-ng of Presbytery to confer with Rev. H. M. Whaling, with a view to producing such a

Whaling, with a view to producing such a change in his doctrinal views as should bring them into harmony with the standards of the Presbyterian Church, would respectfully submit the following report:

We have had several kind interviews with Brother Whaling and we are satisfied that he has made the points of doctrine embraced in the paper he submitted to Presbytery, at its last meeting, the subject of prayerful reconsideration and investigation. As the result of his fuller examination of these points, he reports to us a very decided modification of his views on all the three important doctrines embraced in his examination before Presbytery, namely: Original sin, the Divine decrees and the atonement. That the Presbytery may see to what extent this change of opinion has gone, we herewith submit a letter received by the committee from Brother Whaling, which reads as follows: Whaling, which reads as follows: MEMPHIS, TENN. August 5, 1884.
To Revs. Eugene Daniel and J. M. Rose and Colonel B. M. Estes, Committee:

DEAR BRETHREN—At your request I sub mit to you in writing the following statement of the opinions I now hold respecting the doc trines of original sin, the decrees of God, an trines of original sin, the decrees of God, and the atonement:

1. Original sin is an inherited bias to evil, and this inherited evil tendency, which the Scriptures declare to be itself of the nature of sin, is the cause of all transgressions of, or departures from, the law of God. This tendency Auam rolls over on his posterity through a two-fold channel. As the natural head of all manhind, he transmits his nature to his descendants, according to the laws of to his descendants, according to the laws of heredity; and, as the federal representative of the race, the sin of his failure to accom-plish his probation successfully is imputed to them; the natural relation is the basis of the federal. 2. As to the Divine decrrees, God for dains whatsoever comes to pass. I am willing to say that the decree of election does not turn upon God's foreknowledge of the faith or repentance of the elect, because repeatance and faith are the result of election. None but the elect actually do repent and believe finite worth and sufficient for all; but the appreciation of its benefits is re-stricted to the elect; not because, however, God wills the death of any man, but solely
